Javascript

Want SmallestDotNet functionality for your own site? Add this chunk of Javascript, it'll spit out HTML and you can style to taste.

```
<script type="text/javascript" src="http://www.smallestdotnet.com/smallestdotnet/javascript.ashx"></script>
```

Prefer a Javascript Object (JSON) to detect .NET Framework installatons? Try this instead:

```
<script type="text/javascript" src="http://www.smallestdotnet.com/smallestdotnet/javascriptdom.ashx"></script>
```

Get examples on how to use the JSON object on Scott's Blog.

The .NET Download for you is:

YOUR PERSONALIZED RESULTS

Looks like you have .NET version 3.5 SP1. While you have a recent .NET Framework, but you might think about updating to .NET Framework 4 as well. You should make sure your system is setup to get updates from Windows Update automatically. This will make sure your system is up to date with the latest stuff, including the latest .NET Framework.

WHAT JUST HAPPENED?

This site looked at your browser's "UserAgent" and figured out what version (if any) of the .NET Framework you have (or don't have) installed, then calculated the total size if you chose to download the .NET Framework.

ARE YOU A .NET PROGRAMMER?

If you're a programmer/developer, you might be trying to figure out which .NET Framework for your users to use.

Sometimes finding the right .NET Framework is confusing because different kinds of machines (x86, x64, ia64) that may or may not have different versions of .NET already on them.

If you look for .NET Downloads on Microsoft's site, it might look like the .NET Framework is 200+ megs. It's not. Those big downloads are the Complete Offline Versions of every version of the .NET Framework for every kind of machine possible. The big .NET download includes x86, x64, and ia64. It includes .NET 2.0, 3.0, and 3.5 code for all systems all in one super-archive.

Why would you EVER want to download the whole archive? Only if you're a developer and you want to distribute the .NET Framework the widest possible audience in a format like a CD or DVD.

Go! .NET

What's This?

SmallestDotNet.com is a single page site that does one thing. It tells you the smallest, easiest download you'd need to get the .NET Framework on your system. The size of the .NET download is usually WAY smaller than you think it'll be. There's no database, no cookies, and nothing about your computer has been stored or kept. We just look at the information your browser already reports about your computer and make a suggestion as to the best .NET Framework download for you.

Support

There's no support for this website. It's just a single page meant to save you some time and confusion. I hope it helps you. If not, I'm sorry. When all else fails, you usually can't go wrong by a visit to WindowsUpdate.com.

However, if the site breaks
